

Managing construction safety (including maintenance works) starts early in the construction process. There are many aspects to consider including assessing construction risks arising from design, selecting competent tenderers, assessing contractor tenders, conducting site risk assessments, reviewing contractor safety plans and delivering initial inductions as well as ongoing compliance inspections.

Construction or Contractor Safety Management

As a competent firm we assist and guide you through the process to minimise the potential down side that have plagued many projects in the past.

Service description -

Our Construction Safety Management service assists owners, developers, managers and contractors manage construction safety risks including construction design risks, tender assessment, site risk assessment, safety plan assessment, contractor induction and ongoing construction site compliance (see Compliance, Construction Site).

Service details - We liaise with relevant parties, attend meetings, conduct construction design risk assessments, review proposed tenderers past safety performance, undertake desktop assessment of tenderers safety plan, discuss proposed safety plan with preferred tenderer, assist contractor conduct a site risk assessment, review contractors Safety Plan inclusive of risk / hazard assessment, safe work method statements and other relevant items and provide written reports and recommendations at relevant stages.

How the service works - We can engage at any point in the process, pick up the threads at that time, quickly assess needs and then get on with the job. We come to your office, the contractors office or the site as this is where the working documents or activities are although desktop assessments are carried out at our office. Our regular reports provide advice and recommendations to assist and guide you through the process.

Fisher Jenkin Workplace Safety encourages and assists employers proactively manage workplace safety risks whilst achieving compliance with obligations and responsibilities that employers must embrace in today's business environment.

Please contact our head office or nearest franchise for personal, positive and professional attention to your workplace safety needs.

